School Magazine
2024-2025

“If one cannot do great things, one can do small things in a great way.”

As the 2024-25 editors of the Avanti Magazine, we have been given the opportunity to capture the best moments of the year and to showcase them through our e-magazine. The year has been filled with memorable times for our school and our team has worked relentlessly to pick out the finest hour of each occasion and to weave them into a tapestry filled with laughter, packed with excitement and brimming with love.

Each picture in this magazine has been handpicked by our dedicated team, assembled like pieces of a mosaic into what you see now. We truly took great pleasure in assessing these beautiful moments and putting the best ones into this magazine for all readers to forever cherish. Our journey to create this magazine was filled with laughter, fun and quite a few errors we soon learned from. The events that led to this final piece were pure chaos and used up considerable amount of creativity. We hope that when you flip through these colourful pages you are taken back in time to the wonderful times forever imprinted in our hearts and remember that there is always something to look forward to in every tomorrow to come and something worth learning from every yesterday that had gone by.

And with that message, we thank you for the opportunity given to us and hope that you take as much joy going through this magazine as we did in making it...

Warm Regards,

The Avanti Team 2024-25

MENTOR'S MESSAGE:

Dear Students, Educators, and Esteemed Parents,

As we embark on a new academic year filled with opportunities and challenges, I am filled with immense pride in our school community.

Our journey is driven by the core values of integrity, respect, and excellence, which serve as the foundation for everything we do.

In our pursuit of knowledge, let us instil within ourselves the importance of curiosity and the courage to challenge the status quo.

Every question you ask, every idea you share, contributes to our collective growth. Remember, learning is not just confined to textbooks; it encompasses experiences, dialogues, and shared moments.

Respect for one another is essential in forging a harmonious environment. Embrace diversity and celebrate the unique perspectives that each one of you brings. Together, we can foster a culture of inclusion where every voice is valued. Excellence is an ongoing journey, not a destination. Strive to give your best in all that you undertake, and do not fear failure, for it is often the catalyst for growth. Celebrate your achievements, no matter how small, and support your peers in their endeavours.

As your mentor, I encourage each of you to take ownership of your learning and to never hesitate to seek guidance. Remember, we are here to nurture your potential and help you flourish not just as students, but as responsible, compassionate individuals ready to make a positive impact on the world.

As we embark on this new chapter, let us remember the words of Mahatma Gandhi: "Live as if you were to die tomorrow. Learn as if you were to live forever." This quote serves as a reminder to approach our days with purpose, to remain open to new knowledge, and to embrace each moment with gratitude.

Let us embrace this year with optimism and enthusiasm. Together, we will create lasting memories, build strong foundations, and grow as a family.

Our Principal
Mrs. Susan Barrid

HOUSE OF LOVE.

When i think of House of Love, teamwork is what comes to my mind first. The year went by in the blink of an eye and we only grew closer to each other.

It's been a proud and memorable year for the House of Love. Our house gave its best in every competition, especially the literary and cultural events bagging numerous amount of awards. The Annual sports meet was a big success, our team showcased unity and exceptional talent by winning group events like The March past and Relay race. Each member played a vital role—supporting one another, rising to challenges, and celebrating every achievement together. Our unity, spirit, and commitment truly defined who we are. Our losses showed us our weak points and we only intend to strengthen ourselves and come back even stronger next year. I'm deeply grateful to our house teachers and teammates for their constant support and effort throughout the year.

Our Car

By Aaron Abraham 10c

Just look as it goes like a bullet of a gun!
If you ever noticed this in the traffic sea
It's a first generation swift you see
Look at it sailing up the mountains
Through the roads besides the fountains
Singing its own mechanical song
That a true driver would love to hear on and on
Its favourite food is not only diesel, better
The highways that it loves to munch like bread and butter
It was indeed our first car
And to see it once again, wouldn't I go far

The Waves of Hope

By Shalomi Miriam Samuel, IXC

Oh! Dear turbulous sea
Do wash away my waves
To a place no one can see
Oh! Dear fervent waves
Drench me in your waters
And fill my life with hope and laughter
How lovely are your colours
So bright and warm to sight
Fill my heart and love in my eyes
Dear roaring waves,
Quiet down my troubles
and free me of my sins
Oh! Great sea where the sun sets,
Calm me down, so I don't feel
Keep my cries at bay and make me the happiest
How mysterious and ethereal you are
Stretched out so wide and far
Clean my wings and help me soar
To a new life, open the door
Oh! Fresh, clean water of the sea
Wash me of my past and help me cope
Help me grow into what i am to be
Because you do heal, oh, waves of hope

The Mandela Effect: When Memory Plays A Trick On Us

By Meghna Maijo, IX B

Have you ever been completely certain about something, only to find out you remembered it wrong? That's the Mandela Effect, a strange phenomenon where large groups of people recall the same false memory. The name comes from the widespread but incorrect belief that Nelson Mandela died in prison in the 1980s—when, in reality, he was released and lived until 2013.

The most famous example is that the Monopoly Man never had a monocle, yet many people vividly remember him wearing one.

Now, why does this happen? False memories occur when our brains try to fill in gaps using logic and past experiences. Psychologists believe the Mandela Effect is linked to the misinformation effect, where exposure to incorrect information reshapes our memory. Social reinforcement also plays a role—when enough people believe something, others subconsciously adopt the same memory.

Some speculate this could be proof of parallel universes, where small details differ from our reality. While science attributes it to memory errors, the Mandela Effect remains a fascinating reminder that our brains don't always get it right!

Reading in the Digital Age

By Eshitha Saira George, XD

In today's digital world, reading books may seem old-fashioned, but it's more important than ever. Unlike scrolling through phones or watching short videos, reading encourages deep focus and imagination. Books help expand vocabulary, improve writing skills, and boost comprehension. They also allow readers to explore different cultures, viewpoints, and emotions, building empathy and understanding. While screens offer quick entertainment, books offer meaningful, lasting knowledge. Reading can also reduce stress and improve sleep when done before bedtime instead of using devices. At school, reading supports academic success across all subjects.

Joining book clubs or setting personal reading goals can make reading more enjoyable and consistent. Even just 15 minutes a day can make a difference. In the digital age, choosing a book is a powerful way to slow down, learn, and grow. Students who read regularly not only perform better in school: they become lifelong learners and thoughtful, informed individuals.

Why Boredom Is Actually Good For You

By Anusha R Shenoi, IX B

In a world of constant stimulation: notifications, deadlines and entertainment, boredom is often seen as an inconvenience, even a failure to remain productive. However, research increasingly shows that boredom is not only natural but essential for cognitive and emotional development, especially in students. When the brain is no longer occupied by structured tasks or digital input, it enters a default mode of reflection, imagination, and problem-solving.

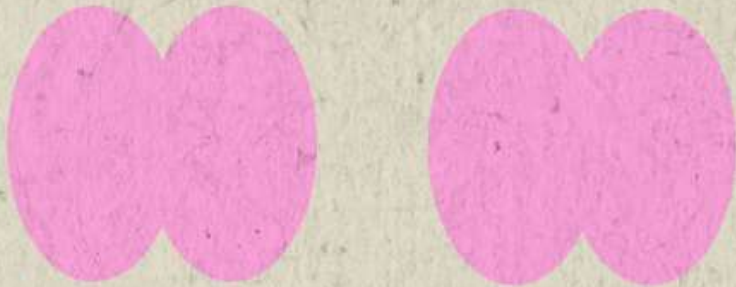

During moments of boredom, the mind drifts, sometimes aimlessly, sometimes creatively. This mental wandering can result in new ideas, unexpected connections, and long-term clarity. In fact, some of history's greatest thinkers credited their most important insights to long, uneventful hours.

In schools, we place high value on constant engagement, but unstructured time is not inherently unproductive. It allows students to regulate their thoughts, build patience, and develop a deeper understanding of their own interests. Rather than viewing boredom as something to avoid, we should reframe it as a vital cognitive pause—a reset button for the mind. In moderation, boredom isn't a weakness. It's a quiet invitation to think more deeply.
